Short Biography

Dr. Eleni Gaki is an Associate Professor in “Statistical Methods in Regional Analysis” at the Department of Business Administration, University of the Aegean. She holds a Bachelor’s degree from the same Department and a PhD in Economic and Regional Analysis, with a dissertation titled “The impact of transport networks and geographical discontinuity on regional development.”

Since her election as Lecturer in 2010, she has taught a wide range of undergraduate and postgraduate courses, including Methods of Regional Analysis, Statistics, Data Analysis, Sustainable Development, Economic Geography and Business Location, and Research Methodology. She has also taught in the MBA program of the Hellenic Open University and in the MSc “Innovation and Entrepreneurship in Tourism” at the University of West Attica. In addition, she serves as adjunct faculty (SEP) at the Hellenic Open University, in the Master’s program “Public Administration,” teaching the module Administrative Decentralization and Local Government: Political and Economic Dimensions.

She has participated in twenty research projects, serving as scientific coordinator for the University of the Aegean in one of them. Since 2015, she has been the Academic Coordinator of the Department’s Internship Program, and from the academic year 2025–26 she serves as Vice-Chair of the Department.

Her research interests focus on key issues of regional development, emphasizing the application of statistical methods and spatial analysis techniques. In particular, her work examines regional resilience, sustainable development, smart cities, the circular economy, and the impact of transport and information and communication technologies on regional growth, as well as the spatial analysis of economic activities and sectors such as tourism. She has published extensively in peer-reviewed journals, book chapters, and conference proceedings, and has also served as editor of one book and co-editor of chapters in two others.
